The Problem

Thursday, 4:55 PM. Call ends.

'Great, so you'll send the revised quote and we'll share the brand files.' Everyone nods. Nobody writes it down. On Monday the client asks where the quote is, and your team asks who was meant to send it.

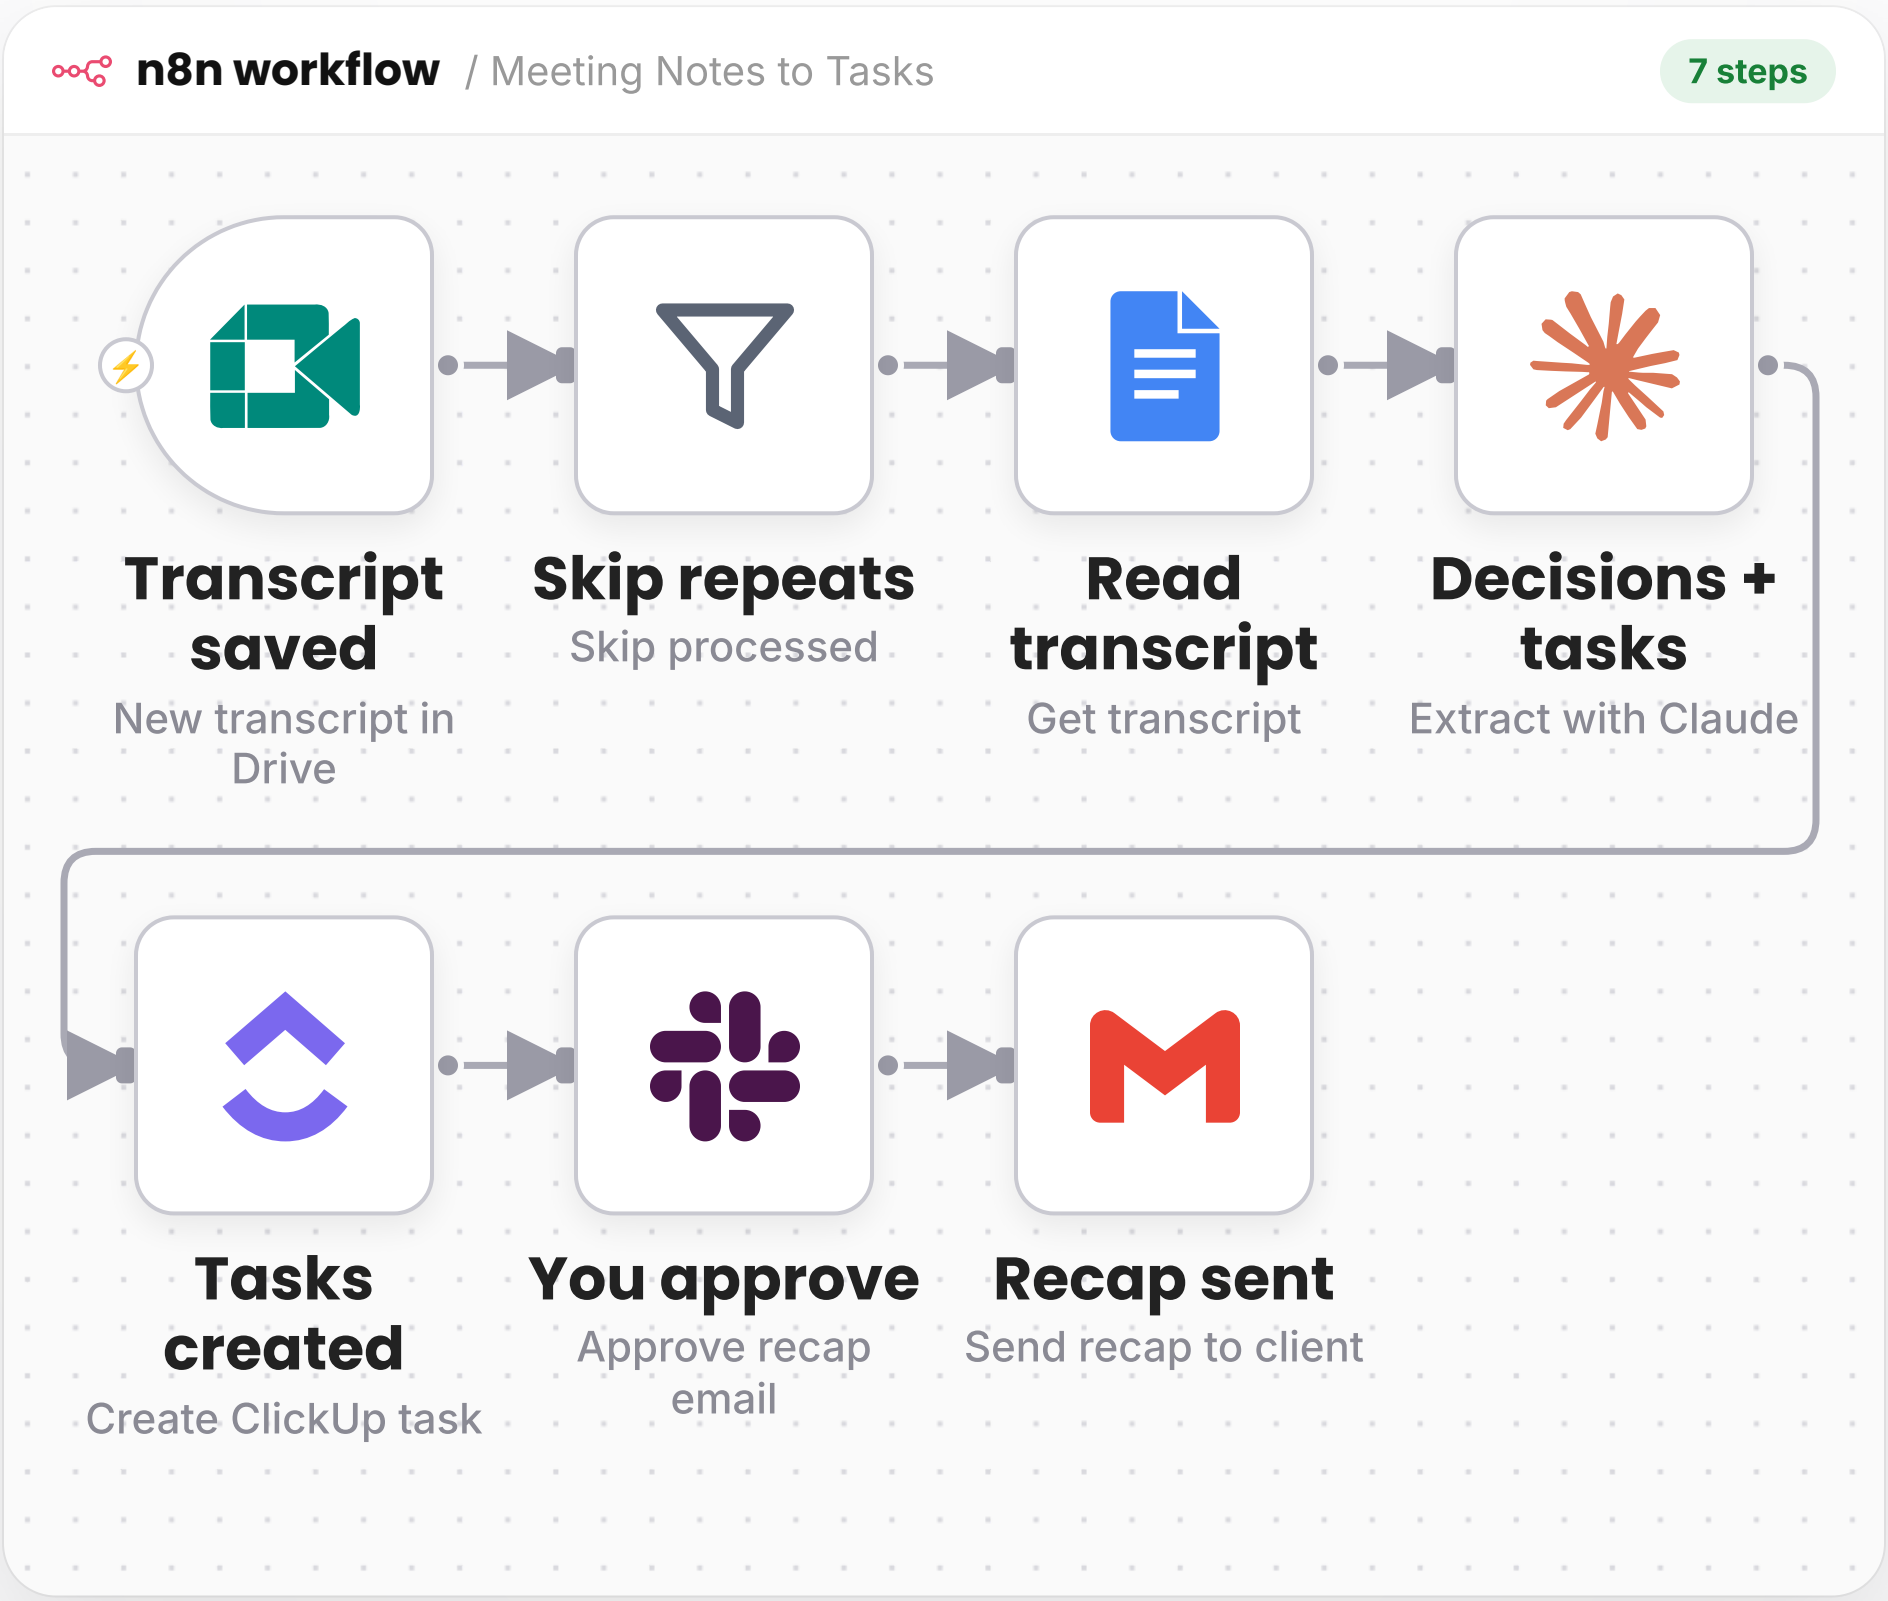

who said they'd do it?

The Workflow

Meeting Notes to Tasks

Every box below is a node in the free workflow.

Step 1

Catch the transcript

Google Meet saves a transcript to your Drive when the call ends. n8n checks that folder every 5 minutes, keeps only files named 'Transcript', and skips any meeting it has already handled.

- [x] Meet saves the transcript to Drive
- [x] n8n checks the folder every 5 min
- [x] Only '... - Transcript' docs
- [x] Already processed? Skipped

Step 2

Read it and find who was there

The transcript is read, timestamps are stripped and the speakers listed. Tiny test calls are dropped. The matching calendar invite gives the client's email address for the recap.

Step 3

Claude pulls out decisions and tasks

Claude lists what was decided, every promise made (task, owner, due date, and the exact words), open questions, and writes a short recap email for the client. Unclear owner or date? It leaves it blank instead of guessing.

with the exact words said

Step 4

Tasks land in ClickUp

Each of your team's tasks becomes a ClickUp task with the right person, the due date, the quote that created it and a link to the transcript. Client to-dos stay out of ClickUp and go into the recap.

Google Sheets

2	Homepage wireframe	Rhea	Tue 3 Nov	To do
3	Check Hindi fonts	Rhea	no date	To do

Step 5

You approve the client recap

Slack shows the summary, both sides' tasks and the recap email. Send recap emails it to the client attendees. Keep as draft saves it in Gmail for you to edit. Every meeting is logged in a sheet.

the client sees it only after you

What Changes

Before and after the workflow

BEFORE

- Tasks lived in someone's head
- Recap sent days later, if ever
- 'Who was doing the quote?'

AFTER

- Every task has an owner and date
- Recap ready minutes after the call
- Every decision written down

STAYS HUMAN

The recap reaches the client only after you tap Send recap. Otherwise it waits as a Gmail draft.
