Your whole day, in one WhatsApp (n8n + Claude)

The Problem

Four apps before chai

Monday, 7:55 AM. Arjun runs a 25-person D2C brand in Jaipur. Before chai he has opened Calendar, Gmail, the sales sheet and the task tracker. He still misses that the 10 AM investor call moved to 9:30.

1. Calendar: 6 events, which ones matter?
2. Gmail: 63 unread
3. Sales sheet: open the laptop
4. Tasks: who owes what?
5. Investor call moved to 9:30 (missed)

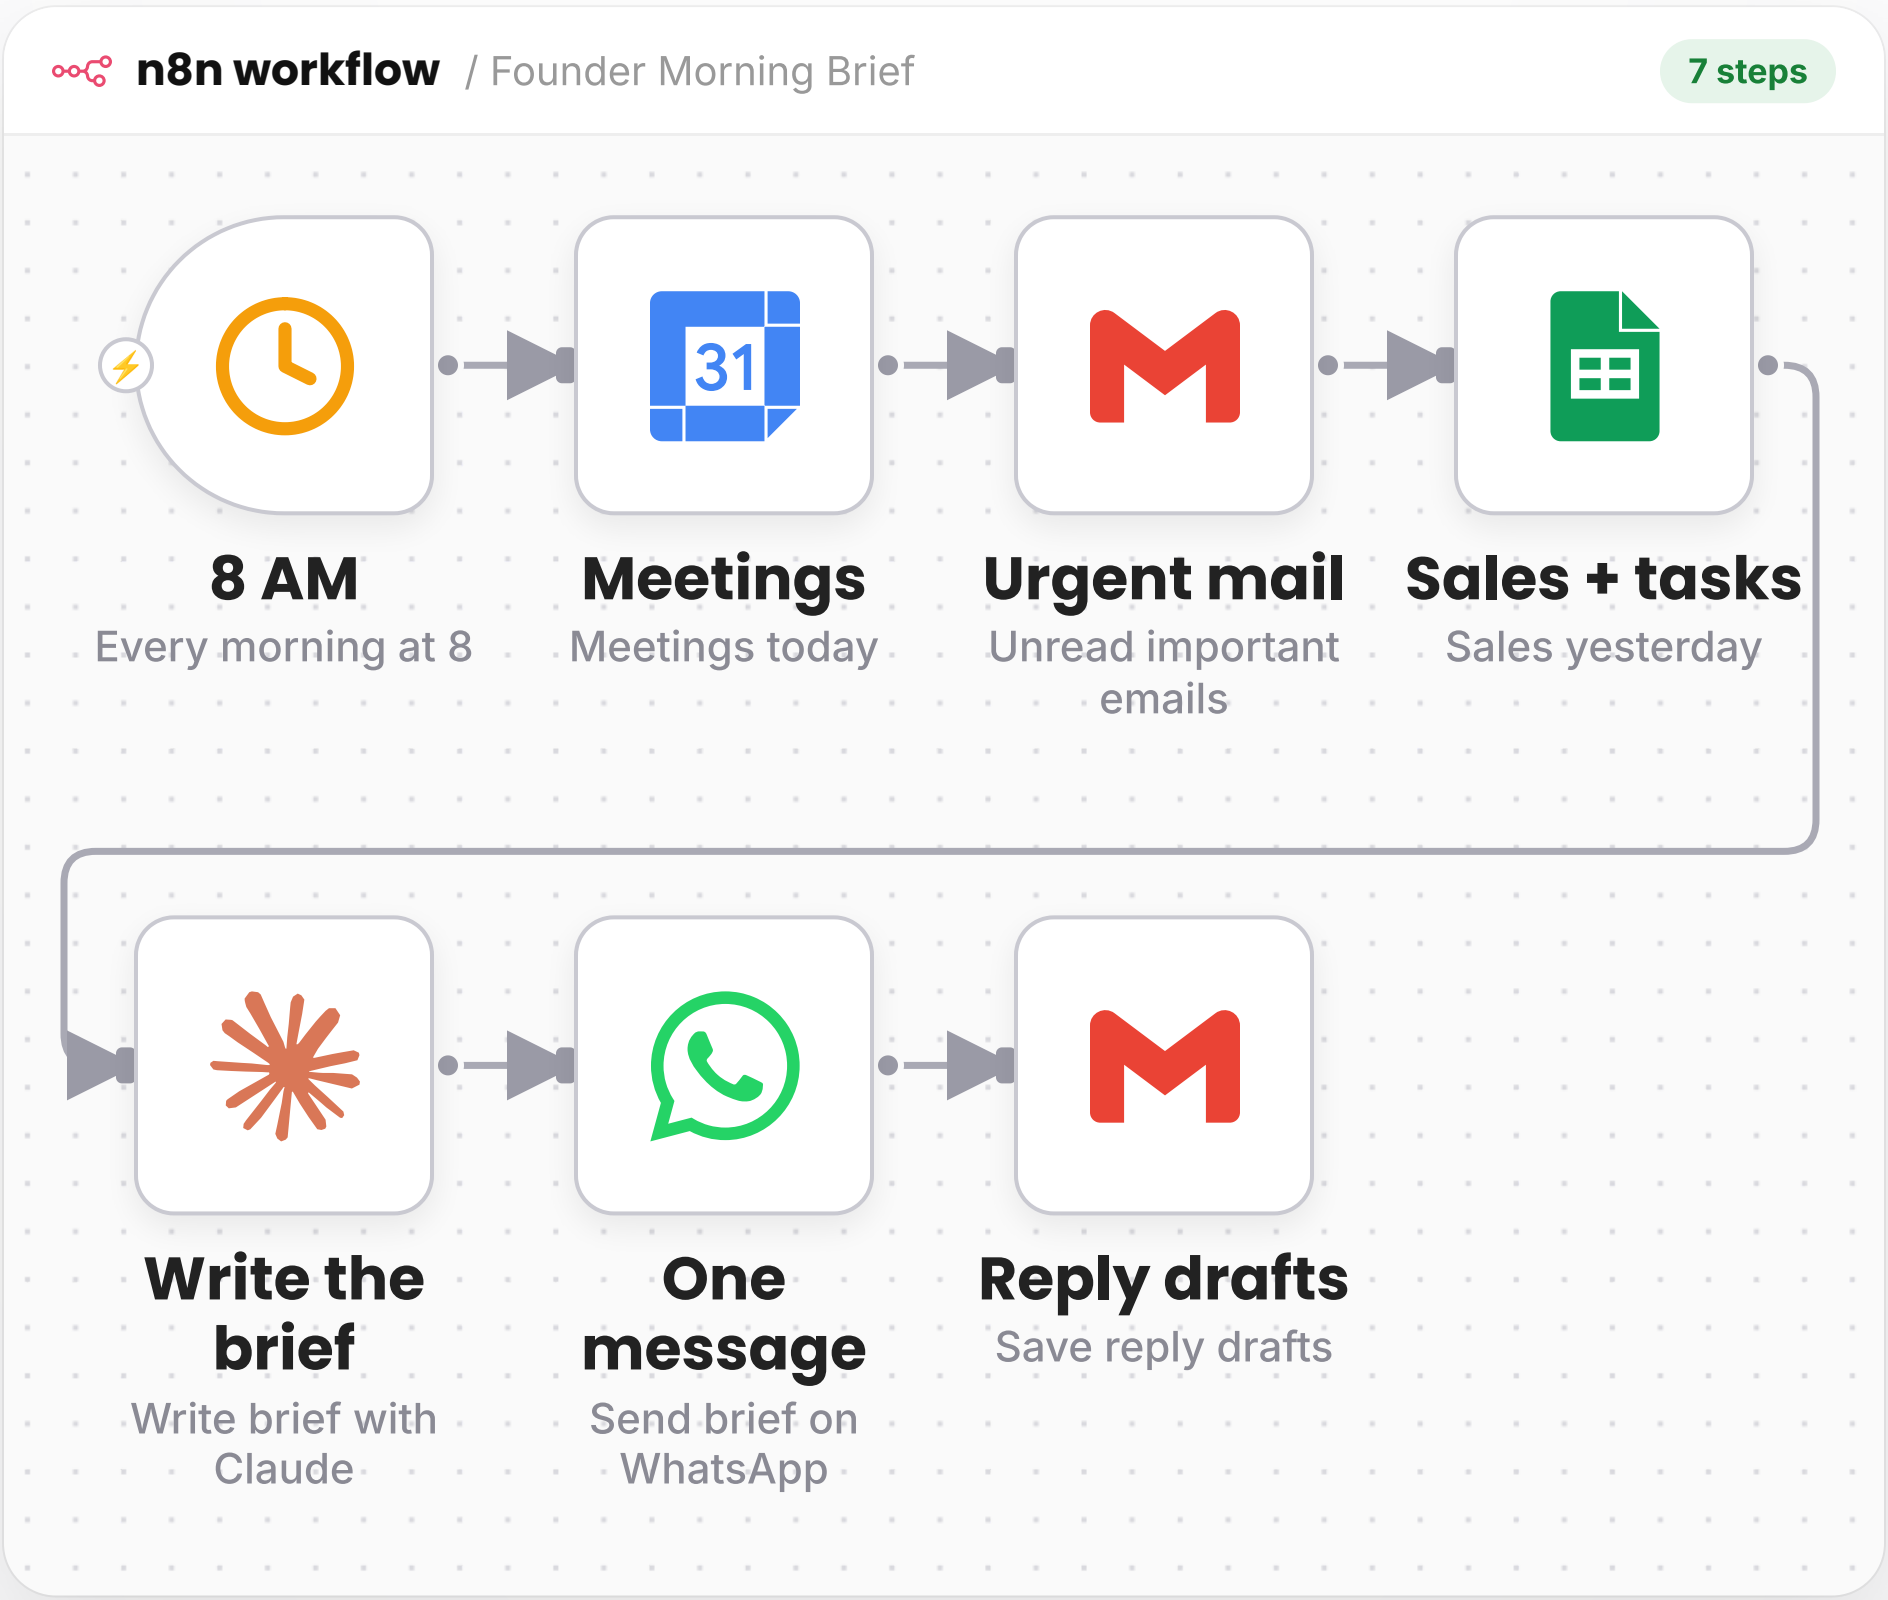

every single morning

The Workflow

Founder Morning Brief

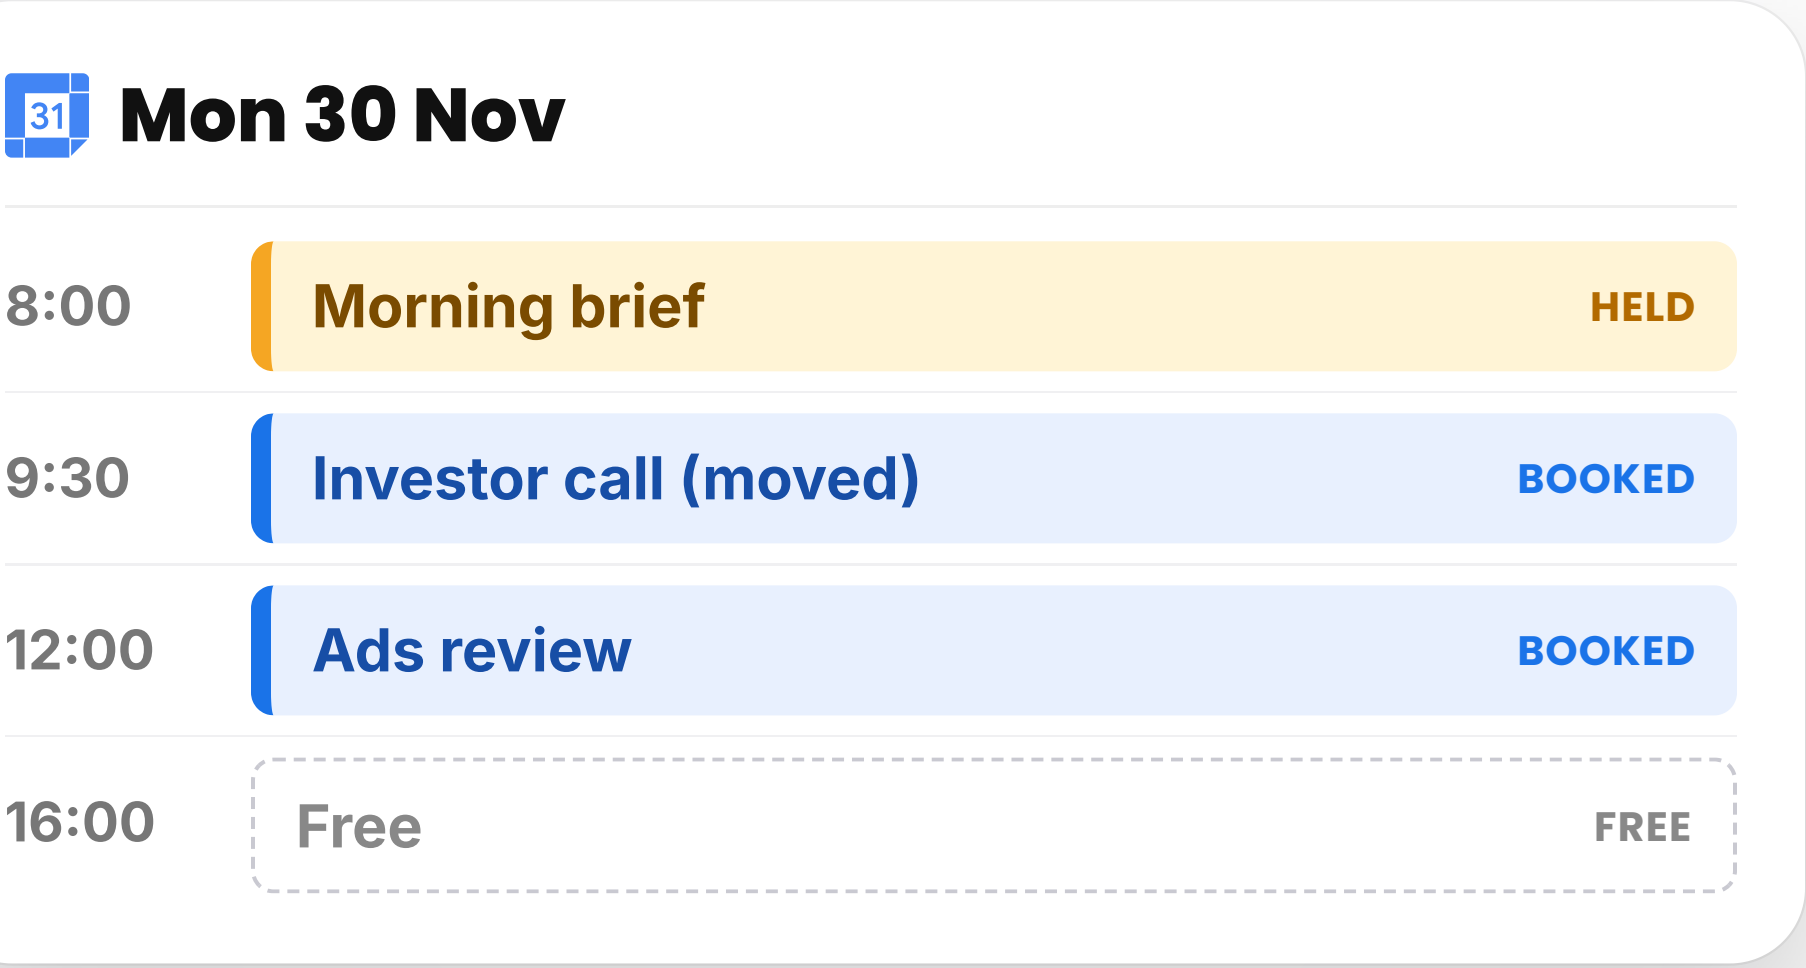

Every box below is a node in the free workflow.

Step 1

8 AM, once a day

Every morning at 8, Monday to Saturday, the brief starts. A guard makes sure it is built only once a day, even if the workflow is re-run.

Step 2

Pull from four places

n8n reads today's meetings from Google Calendar, unread mail from the last day (no promotions), yesterday's sales and open tasks from Google Sheets, and packs them into one compact list.

Google Sheets

Daily sales

	Date	Channel	Orders	Revenue
1	29/11	Shopify	96	₹1,42,300
2	29/11	Amazon	46	₹68,900
3	28/11	Shopify	81	₹1,20,100
4	28/11	Amazon	37	₹55,400

nothing new to set up

Meetings today · Unread important emails · Sales yesterday · Open tasks · Bundle everything

Step 3

Claude writes the brief

Claude turns it into a short brief: meetings with one prep line each, yesterday's sales, the 3 emails that matter and overdue tasks, ending with your top 3 for today. Numbers are copied, never invented.

Step 4

One WhatsApp before chai

The brief arrives as one WhatsApp at 8. If WhatsApp's 24 hour window has closed, a short template version goes instead, and if that fails too, the full brief comes by email.

Step 5

Replies drafted, not sent

For urgent emails, Claude's short reply drafts are saved in the right Gmail threads. Nothing is sent. You open Gmail, check, edit and hit send yourself.

- Urgent mail found at noon

AFTER

- One WhatsApp at 8 AM
- Top 3 for the day, clear
- Reply drafts waiting in Gmail

STAYS HUMAN
